Back-To-School Lunchbox Snacks

 Sharon Feiereisen

Have you ever been in a situation where you find out your kid has been “trading” lunchbox items that you’ve shlepped across town or shelled out premium dollars for? Many of us have and it’s infuriating to say the least. In my case it was Hershy’s chocolate milk that was being traded (who would think!?).

With that top of mind we’ve scoured the aisles to highlight some of the best lunchbox snack items that your kids will likely refuse to trade. And, should they not be fans, they’re delicious, we can pretty much guarantee you’ll happily eat them.

No lunchbox would be complete without something sweet (for better or worse...), REAL Cookies are made with clean and simple ingredients, including almond and coconut flours, real fruit and simply sweetened with Vermont maple syrup. The cookies are also gluten-free, grain-free, dairy-free, vegan, kosher and paleo-friendly. They come in three flavors: Chocolate Chip, Peanut Butter Chocolate Chip and Lemon Blueberry.
